Boston recognizes Chinese American veterans

BY LING-MEI WONG

The Boston City Council voted to recognize Chinese-American World War II veterans on Sept. 11 at its weekly meeting.

Council President Michelle Wu filed the resolution in support of H.R. 2358.S.1050, a federal bill that would convey a group designation of the Congressional Gold Medal to Chinese-American WWII veterans. The bill notes some 20,000 Chinese Americans served in the American armed forces during WWII, despite there being fewer than 120,000 Chinese American residents in the United States at the time.

About 40 percent of the Chinese Americans were veterans not American citizens and ineligible to become citizens until the war was almost over and the Chinese Exclusion Act was repealed by Congress. As 2017 marks the 75th anniversary of the repeal of the Chinese Exclusion Act, passage of the bill during this legislative session would be meaningful the surviving veterans.

Representatives Ted Lieu from California were the lead sponsors of bill H.R. 2358 filed May 4, while Senator Tammy Duckworth from Illinois and Senator Thad Cochran from Mississippi were lead cosponsors of bill S.1050.

Vikal proposed designating Chinatown as a historic district and enforcing absolute rent control and eminent domain.

Proposed hotel projects

Most candidates highlighted the need for developing affordable housing over hotels.

“I am extremely concerned about the number of hotel proposals here in Chinatown,” Kelly said. “We should be fighting for more housing, more affordable housing, more workforce housing. That should be the No. 1 priority.”

Immigrant rights

All candidates voiced support for maintaining Boston as a sanctuary city, which does not enforce federal immigration laws and will not provide resources to help federal Immigration and Customs Enforcement officials arrest and deport residents.

“We are a nation of immigrants,” Trittia said, whose father is an Italian immigrant. “On a local level, I support Boston being a sanctuary city. ... I also support what was announced today as far as the city providing legal funding for immigrants who are facing legal battles of deportation or other concerns as to their immigrant status.”

South Cove Community Health Center celebrates 45 years

BY LING-MEI WONG

South Cove Community Health Center (SCCHC) celebrated its 45th anniversary celebration and gala on Sept. 9 at the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum. About 460 guests attended the gala for the community health center.

SCCHC was originally part of the Asian American Civic Association until 1972, when the health center opened in a storefront on Harrison Avenue. Today, it serves 32,000 people in four locations at Boston and Quincy, with a fifth location in Malden to open. More than 90 percent of its patients speak an Asian language as their first language. SCCHC was ranked No. 1 out of Massachusetts’ 27 community health centers.

“As we express gratitude, we must not utter words but show action,” said SCCHC board president Nelson Liu. The health center recognized Helen Chin Schlichte with a Humanitarian Award. Amy Guen received the Lifetime Achievement Award, along with executive director Eugene Welch. Each award-ee was filmed by director Kenneth Eng.

Chin Schlichte spoke about growing up in Charlestown and helping her father interpret for Chinese elders needing medical attention. Guen was born in Boston’s Chinatown, the eldest of six siblings, and became a social worker. She founded SCCHC, South Cove Manor Nursing and Rehabilitation Center and the Asian American Civic Association, originally the Chinese American Civic Association.

In 1998, Welch brought in to balance South Cove’s finances. He was hired as chief operating officer and has been executive director since 2002. “Happiness is helping others,” Welch said.

Public Announcement of Request for Letters of Interest for Design Build Services for the Red Line and Orange Line Signals Systems Upgrades Project Contract No. Q09CN01

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (the “MBTA”) hereby solicits Letters of Interest (LOI) from firms or teams (the “Design Build Entities”) interested in providing Design Build (DB) services for the Red Line and Orange Line Signals Systems Upgrades Project (the “Project”) in Boston, Massachusetts under MBTA Contract No. Q09CN01. The Project is being procured using a two-phase best-value DB procurement process pursuant to M.G.L. c. 149A, s. 14, et seq. and consistent with the MBTA’s Design Build Procurement Procedures.

The MBTA intends to enter into a DB contract with the best-value Design Build Entity identified through a two-phase selection process including a Request for Qualifications (RFQ) with a subsequent Request for Proposals (RFP). The RFQ will be utilized to identify qualified Design Build Entities to submit a proposal pursuant to Section 19 of M.G.L. c. 149A. The best-value selection criteria detail will be provided in the RFP. Respondents to this request for LOI will receive future notifications of the RFQ’s availability and its amendments.

The Disadvantaged Business Enterprise (DBE) participation goal is 4% of the design services and 7% for the construction portions of the work to be performed under the DB contract. Design Build Entities shall affirmatively ensure that in regard to any contract entered into pursuant to this solicitation, minority and female consultant firms and construction contractors will be afforded full opportunity to submit proposals and will not be discriminated against on the grounds of race, color, religion, sex, age or national origin in consideration for award. Design Build Entities will also be required to comply with FTA Civil Rights Provisions including EEO, DBE, Labor Work Force and Title VI. Because the MBTA reserves the right to use federal funding, respondents should assume that FTA requirements for federally funded projects will apply.

“Happiness is helping others,” Welch said.

Study looks at development impact on Chinatown businesses in Boston, NYC and Philadelphia

BY LING-MEI WONG

A study on Chinatown small businesses located at East Coast Chinatowns in Boston, New York City and Philadelphia. A study on Chinatown small businesses located at East Coast Chinatowns in Boston, New York City and Philadelphia. The Chinatown neighborhoods were selected for their common traits. Each is located in downtown or central business district, housing vibrant ethnic enclaves. All three have an increasing influx of non-Asian individuals and new real estate developments pose potential threats to the continued existence of the ethnic enclave. Finally, each Chinatown has been established for many years, with other pockets of immigrant Asian enclaves in the same metropolitan area, such as Malden and Quincy in greater Boston.

Residential populations have shifted over time. Boston’s Asian residential base is stable but the populations itself has become increasingly non-Asian. Philadelphia’s Chinatown has increased all its residential populations. In New York City’s Chinatown, its overall residents have decreased, with fewer Asians and more non-Asians.

The area studied for Boston’s Chinatown covers Essex Street to Castle Square, right on the border of the Theater District and the South End. New York’s Chinatown was defined as the one in Manhattan, encompassing Canal, Grand and Mott streets. Philadelphia’s Chinatown stretches from Vine Street in the north to Arch Street in the south, and from North 11th Street and North 9th Street in the east to North Broad Street in the west.

Property taxes for all three Chinatowns are increasing.

The Chinatown Coalition met Sept. 14 at the Boston Chinatown Neighborhood Center. The Boston Transportation Department (BTD) presented plans to renovate Chinatown’s Phillips Square on Harrison Avenue between Essex Street and Beach Street into a more family-friendly space. The plan includes adding outdoor dining areas, space for art, guardian lion statues and a bike lane. The renovation project is funded by Verizon Communications with $150,000 and is scheduled to break ground next spring.

The Asian American Civic Association (AAC) presented on its programs, including Malan Society, Youth Employment and Job Retention. The Center provides non-native speakers and lower-income families with education and career training.

Addressing Disparities in Asian Population through Translational Research (ADAPT) fellow Shakara Cox and Dr. Carolyn Rubin shared research findings on problem gambling. The study showed lack of resources, a sense of isolation and limited help services contribute to gambling addiction in Asian immigrant populations.

Quincy saves on power bills through load shedding and solar electricity

BY EMMA SMYTH

We all know that reducing the electricity use in your house leads to savings in your energy bill. Imagine the savings if reducing electricity use was done for the Quincy’s municipal buildings. The savings would be impressive, right? Well, that is exactly what is happening. Through monitoring electricity use at four of the Quincy’s larger schools, the City has reduced its expense for electricity this year by more than $88,000.

Over the past two summers, the City of Quincy has saved electricity and money. This effort is led by Shelly Dein, the City’s energy manager, and involves the efforts and cooperation of many others from the schools’ senior custodians to the City’s energy technician.

The bills for large commercial electricity accounts are determined by a number of factors including how much electricity is used that month, the largest amount of electricity used in a 15 minute period during the year when the Northeast electrical grid is under the most stress because demand is highest. This effort is helped by the solar electricity generating systems on 13 of the City’s school roofs, which are generating electricity for the City’s use, further lowering the amount the City needs to buy from utilities, assuming the sun is shining during the peak demand hour. Last summer these four schools used 58 percent less electricity during the peak demand hour than they used the prior year’s peak demand hour, which translated into a 27 percent drop in peak use over the City’s 325 electricity accounts.

By understanding the amount of electricity needed during peak demand periods, utilities and ISO-NE are able to plan what power plants need to be operating, and how much power they need to generate, without the need to replace them. Turning off unnecessary electricity is called load shedding.

ISO-NE which manages the electricity grid, raised the capacity charge this year, and will raise the charge again next year. To minimize the City’s cost increases despite rising electricity rates, the Metropolitan Area Planning Council; a regional planning agency for municipalities, sends out daily peak load demand risk assessments.

On likely peak demand days, the City’s Energy Team and the senior custodians at Lincoln Hancock Community School, Central Middle School, Quincy High School and North Quincy High School carefully monitor electricity use to reduce the need to buy electricity, particularly during the hour when New England’s use is predicted to be the highest. This effort is helped by the solar electricity generating systems on 13 of the City’s school roofs, which are generating electricity for the City’s use, further lowering the amount the City needs to buy from utilities, assuming the sun is shining during the peak demand hour. “A breakfast seminar took place August 31 at Boston Chinese Evangelical Church, hosted by South Cove Manor Nursing and Rehabilitation Center. The presentation was on workouts and nutrition plans and about 40 seniors attended the seminar.

According to guest speaker Jerry Carballo, seniors should say no to green leafy vegetables that grow above ground, fish and seafood, lean meat, olive oil, eggs and mixed nuts.

Carballo suggested seniors say no to beer, large amount of pasta, rice, bread, soda, juice, chocolate and candy.

When it comes to exercise, his tips for seniors are to exercise 15 to 30 minutes a day. Strength training will increase muscle elasticity and strengthen your connective tissues, tendons, and ligaments. Also, wait two hours after you eat to exercise. Stop the exercise immediately if you develop new pain or symptom such as swelling, shortness of breath, or extreme tiredness.

If you have special medical condition, talk to your doctor about any exercises that would be safe before start.

DEVELOPMENT: Tool gauges displacement

Boston’s property tax increases are moderate, while New York City’s property taxes are growing significantly. In Philadelphia, property taxes are increasing as its tax system is in transition.

Retail space inventory, residential populations, occupancy cost, ownership and the business community were measured for neighborhood displacement risk. Boston scored at moderate risk of displacement, based on this risk assessment.

The paper includes policy recommendations to give incentives, such as lower property taxes for renting to a locally owned or legacy business. Owners should also be penalized for intentional vacancies. There should be devoted resources to track, organize and empower small businesses to vocalize concerns.
Seniors suffer greater harm from smoking

BY SARA BROWN

Smoking is good for no one, but it particularly harms senior citizens.

If you know a senior citizen that smokes, you should encourage them to stop smoking. Smoking could make any of their health issues worse. The risk for lung cancer increases in seniors.

However, senior smokers are less likely to quit or even try to quit than younger smokers. However, when they do try to quit they are often more successful. This is why it is important for elderly care workers to encourage residents to quit smoking.

It is also very serious if seniors are around smokers. Secondhand smoke causes several health conditions and they become even more pronounced for seniors. People exposed to secondhand smoke are more likely to develop lung cancer or have heart problems as a result. It also adversely affects lung function, and can cause adult-onset asthma.

Cardiac care for kids

BY TUFTS MEDICAL CENTER

Most kids have a big heart (emotionally speaking). But what can you do as a parent to keep your young hearts physically healthy? We asked Audrey C. Marshall, MD, the new chief of pediatric cardiology at Floating Hospital for Children, some common questions about what makes our ticker, tick.

Question: Heart disease runs in my family. What are the chances my child will eventually develop it?

Pediatric and adult types of heart disease can run in some families. The typical adult onset heart disease has some modifiable risk factors that most of us are familiar with, such as high blood pressure or high cholesterol. Most pediatric heart diseases, resulting from congenital heart defects, occur sporadically, that is, they aren’t inherited in any obvious way, and there aren’t any clear ways to avoid their occurrence. Overall, congenital heart defects occur in about 1 in every 1,000 babies who are born. In some families who have had heart defects in their family, the chances of having a similar defect occur in a child can be several times higher than that, but overall it’s still quite low. Testing for congenital heart defects can be done before birth, using ultrasound.

Question: I have a child who has been anxious her entire life. How much affect does stress have on the heart?

It is difficult for a parent to see a young one in a state of anxiety, whether it is for a fleeting moment or it is more chronic. In older children, stress can cause heart-related symptoms, such as palpitations or chest pain, and can also affect the circulation by increasing heart rate or raising blood pressure. Fortunately, these effects usually come and go with periods of stress, and so there is no known lasting effect on the heart for most children.

Question: I have two children – 8 and 12 – and they LOVE ice cream. I make sure they have healthy meals, but as long as I’m young I’m not overweight, is a bowl of ice cream each night okay?

Most likely, your son’s heart murmur is what we call a “benign murmur”, meaning that it’s not a sign of any disease or risk for exercise. Benign murmurs are usually easy to identify with just a simple physical examination and an electrocardiogram by someone trained in heart exams. If these are reassuring and there isn’t another particular reason to be concerned with your son’s participation in sports, then you probably don’t have to worry, and you can encourage him to continue to participate.

Question: What is the single most important thing I can do for my child’s heart health?

The biggest risks to most children’s lifetime heart health are posed by obesity, poor nutritional choices, and a sedentary lifestyle.

Sanathan

Heart disease is the No. 1 killer among American women. Yet, research suggests more females worry about getting breast cancer than cardiac problems, despite the fact that heart disease kills six times as many women each year.

“The word cancer frightens people, and it tends to garner a lot more concern than heart disease,” explains Ayan Patel, MD, director of the Women’s Heart Center at Tufts Medical Center. “There has been a misconception that heart attacks are predominantly a disease of men.”

“Women may have atypical symptoms of heart disease, so it’s especially important that they are proactive about assessing their personal risk,” says Sophie Wells, MD, a cardiologist at Tufts Medical Center.

To prevent heart disease from developing, Dr. Wells advises women to work closely with their doctor, undergo routine tests that monitor blood pressure, blood sugar, and cholesterol, and adhere to a healthy lifestyle.

“For many people, simple changes can go a long way,” she says.

In 2012, a study conducted by the American Heart Association revealed that only 65 percent of women surveyed said they would call 911 if they thought they were having symptoms of a heart attack, although 81 percent said that they would call for help if someone else were having symptoms of a heart attack.
